

THE REFORMATION

OBSERVING 500 YEARS

Spreading the Message:

Preaching

One of the most surprising consequences of Luther's scriptural assertions was that a simple preacher had as much authority as the Pope. That can still catch people a little off guard today! For Luther, the Reformation really was, at its core, a preaching movement. It was all about delivering God's law and God's promise to the people sitting in the pews. And it's the same today for those preachers who follow in Luther's evangelical footsteps. A sermon is never about what you should do, or need to do; it is all about what God is doing for you - giving you his promise that sin, death and the devil do not have the final word over you, God's forgiveness, Christ, does.
